

Anglers' Pier News

Anglers from the local pier at Essex Ave. and the Beach started out Sunday with one of the largest catches yet. Three hundred ninety seven were brought in by ardent fishermen, including kings, weakies and one perch. However, yesterday with choppy waters prevalent, fishermen spent their time deriving health and fresh air rather than hooking their finny friends.

Club Notes

Walter Raffel, on a recent visit to Stewart, Fla., won first prize for catching the largest king mackerel. The fish weighed 28 pounds and Walter received a silver cup.

Mahlon H. Taylor, Sr., while on a trip to Canada, went fishing in the Tobique River, and caught a 13 pound salmon.

Elmer Einwachter last week won a prize of $10.00 worth of fishing tackle, and after the boys were through dividing it up, it cost Elmer $1.25 more to square things.

Bernie Levy, while fishing recently made a cast and was surprised to see hook, line and sinker going up in the air. At first it looked as if Bernie was fishing for flying fish, but it turned out his hooks got tangled up in the string of a box kite a youngster was flying on the beach.

Rough Sea Slows Up Fishing at Local Pier

Exceptionally small catches from the head of the Anglers' Pier, Essex Ave. and the Beach, have been reported during the last week due to the rough waters caused by local storm conditions. Sunday, the largest number of fish were caught, which was 23 king. However, as better weather seems to be on its way, the anglers are looking forward to a good weekend's catch. The water at present is warm and full of fish, but it seems they refuse to bite until a calmer sea appears.
